Wow, what a time to be President of a Foundation—any Foundation! As you are all aware, our economy has been in the doldrums for the past year and all Foundations have experienced downturns.

Jack Quinn

While we have experienced some difficulties ourselves, our portfolio is fairly diversified and we have weathered the storm better than some. Even through these trying times, we have maintained our level of scholarships. It is at times like these when our needs are the greatest, so too is the demand from our applicants for scholarship funds.

We have a great staff and a terrific Board. Our commitment is to the students. We are doing everything in our power to be able to continue to maintain our scholarship activity.

This is where you come in. If you have donated in the past, thank you. If it is within your power to contribute now, we welcome you assisting us. As I stated in a previous message, there are many ways the average citizen can help—donating stock options, putting us in your will, creating a family endowment, etc. Any contributions are appreciated.

I am prepared to turn the reins over to the capable hands of Sean McCarthy as the next President of the Foundation. I am sure he will continue to lead us down a very successful path. Again, thanks for all that you have done for Pueblo Community College.

Colorado's human potential. Pueblo Community College has given birth to prominent business people, successful community leaders and a four year university among many other contributions. It is a cornerstone of the community's many economic growth initiatives, steering students toward the fulfillment of their dreams and aspirations. The 75th Anniversary commemorative clock tower is an expression of this vital cycle: learn, earn, lead, and teach; a connection we all share.

It humbles me to have the honor to serve the College and the Foundation. The vision of Margaret Peterson and Hattie Mead along with Messrs. Frank Hoag and Dr. C.N. Caldwell is the headwater of our cherished institution. Our halls have molded and developed many of today's leaders. My time with the Foundation has afforded me the privilege to walk with today's visionary community leaders: Tony Fortino, Dr. Mike Davis, Judge Joe Ulibarri and Jack Quinn. These doyens of yesteryear and today strove for achievement from which PCC's greatness emanates.

Dr. J.D. Garvin has recast the mission and opportunities for our scholars in the past year. The cutting edge curriculum has left little doubt PCC will continue cultivating the next generation of successful, contributing citizens. Now more than ever the call is present to "invest in our human potential." Whether small or large, an investment in our future will return immeasurable dividends, which will connect the giants of the past with those yet to roam PCC's passageways. The symbolism of our commemorative clock tower chime will powerfully remind all of this heritage...each time the bell tolls it will literally toll for thee, as we designate this signature honor for all our donors, students, and achievers...past and present. Thank you for supporting the PCC Foundation!

INSET: Fred "Fritz" Gorsich

What wasn't mentioned that day was how one man's vision in the early 1990s provided the funding that made the 54,000 square-foot GATC possible. That man—Fred "Fritz" Gorsich—believed strongly enough in higher education and the opportunities that it could give to Puebloans that he left the PCC Foundation $3.7 million from his estate when he died in the early 1990s. That money was used to leverage almost $5.7 million in state funds and grants to break ground on the tech center in 1995 on PCC's Pueblo campus and officially dedicate its opening on August 22, 1997.

What's more, the Vestas announcement showed that Gorsich continues to make a positive economic impact on Pueblo. In essence, he continues to bring jobs to the community and to spark economic growth by making it possible for Puebloans to acquire the highly technical skills needed to find good jobs right here in their hometown.

"Even then, he recognized PCC as being the economic engine that supported growth in Pueblo," said Dr. J.D. Garvin, PCC President. "His vision for this city is now bringing hundreds of jobs to Pueblo and is creating a 1,200-acre industrial park that will house Vestas and other companies in the future. You could say that it's all because of Fritz."

The partnership between PCC and Vestas is one of many that have made the GATC the economic engine noted by Garvin. It also was the original vision that Dr. Joe May had when he first unveiled his plans for the tech center in 1993 a few months after becoming PCC's president. The tech center has strengthened PCC's ties to businesses by enabling it to integrate its educational programs into meeting the customized training needs of industry. He saw the center as a way to weave education and business together to create practical business applications.

The key, he realized, was for industry to "invest" in the tech center by loaning high-tech equipment to PCC for the purpose of enabling students to acquire the most up to date "state of the practice" skills. From the very start, PCC has aimed to develop business partnerships that serve the market goals of each business partner as well as the educational and training mission of PCC. That mission centers on providing learning opportunities that allow students to acquire the skills needed for careers, transfer, and professional and personal growth.

The list of such partners is lengthy today and includes both local and national companies. Most notable current local partners are 3-D Systems, Airgas, Black Hills Corp. (formerly Aquila), Pueblo Board of Water Works, Rexal-Blazer and Xcel Energy. National partners include Allen-Bradley/Rockwell Automation, AutoCAD, Brown & Sharpe, Carboloy, Chick Workholding, Cisco Systems, Do All, Flow International, Haas Automation Inc., Hyd-Mech, Kennametal, Lincoln Electric, Lista, Mastercam, Predator Software, Pro-Engineer, Solidworks, Starrett and Surfcam.

While PCC's basic mission has remained constant since it was founded in 1993, it has been playing an even greater role in Pueblo's economic development efforts since the early 1980s by providing the customized training for companies recruited by the Pueblo Economic Development Corporation (PEDCO). The college's role accelerated for several years after Sperry Corporation was recruited to build a plant at Pueblo's Airport Industrial Park. PCC's Economic and Workforce Development Training Department recently has become increasingly active in providing training for existing industry both locally and regionally as well as those expanding to Pueblo.

Vestas is the latest to recognize the customized training capabilities of the GATC. After its representatives visited the center, they had John Vukich, PCC's Director of Economic and Workforce Development Training, come to Denmark to get a first-hand look at Vestas' manufacturing operation. Once it became evident that PCC could provide the training that Vestas needed, PCC became a key ingredient in the formula being packaged by PEDCO that led the wind energy company to expand to Pueblo.

In October, Vestas representatives spent two days meeting with Vukich, determining the wind energy company's specific job skill sets and developing the training programs that would provide the necessary skills for the 500-550 workers to be employed at the plant. For Vestas, PCC will either supply the training needed itself or call on established partners who have the expertise to handle specific functions. The Economic and Workforce Development Training Department's ability to serve this role is unique in this region.

"That's what sets us apart really, is our ability to be a one-stop shop for a company that comes to us with training needs," said Vukich. "This provides the best service for our customers."

PCC will directly provide approximately 82 percent of the customized training, with partners handling the remaining 18 percent. Vestas is expected to begin hiring employees in spring 2009, with training to begin soon afterward. The plant is expected to open in late summer.

Vestas and those 500+ jobs would not have come to Pueblo without PCC's Gorsich Advanced Technology Center and the training it will provide them. But it was all made possible by Fred "Fritz" Gorsich and his original vision.

"Who knows what long-range effect it will have and how much of an economic impact it will have on Pueblo," Garvin noted. "This is much more than about scholarships or an academic endowment. This is a love for a community. Now that's a living legacy!" ■

Vestas Selects Pueblo Community College for its Workforce Development

Vestas installed its first wind turbine and its first large turbine factory on the outskirts of Lem, Denmark in 1979. It has since played an active role in the fast-moving wind power industry. From being a pioneer in the industry with a staff of approximately 60 in 1987, they are today a global, market-leading group with over 15,000 employees. Vestas is the leading producer of high technological wind power solutions. Its core business includes development, manufacturing, sales, marketing and maintenance of wind power systems that use wind energy to produce electricity. ■

Fortino's Gift Lights Up the Tony Fortino Ballroom!

Barbara and Tony Fortino's initial gift of $50,000 in the 1990s helped to renovate the PCC College Center Ballroom which had not been updated since the 1960s. The ballroom recently underwent another face lift with warm earth tones walls, new furniture and carpet. Barbara and Tony stepped up and pledged to gift eight pendent chandeliers and their gift is like icing on the cake—beautiful.

The Fortinos have been long-time supporters of PCC. Tony stepped down as President of the PCC Foundation in 2006 and served in that position since its inception in 1981. He is credited with leading the Foundation to the strong organization that it is today.

Thank you Barbara and Tony! ■

Adopt an Arts and Sciences department

The Arts and Sciences division is raising funds to provide a cash award to outstanding majors in each of the following departments: English, Math, Education, Arts & Humanities, Early Childhood Education, Physical and Life Sciences, Reading, Sociology and Behavioral Sciences. There is an outside donor who funds the English award, so we are seeking $3,500/year to fund the other awards. Faculty and staff have contributed about half of the money needed so far, and we welcome your help in "adopting" a department. For more information, contact Ross Barnhart, Learning Center Director at 719.549.3365, or at ross.barnhart@pueblocc.edu. ■

PCC Foundation hosts Scholarship Reception

More than 200 students and donors gathered to meet each other at a Scholarship Reception hosted by Pueblo Community College Foundation. Seventy percent of the 4000 PCC students need financial assistance to attend college. An education is a life changing opportunity. To find out more about how you can help a student with scholarship opportunities, call Diane Porter at 719.549.3303. ■

Heritage Hall Dedicated

Heritage Hall was dedicated during the 75th Anniversary celebration. It represents 75 years of photos, diplomas, sports and headlines that showcase the significance and evolution of San Isabel College, Pueblo Junior College (PJC), Southern Colorado State College, University of Southern Colorado and Pueblo Community College. Artifacts that were long sheltered in archival closets and personal collections are now displayed together in the College Center for all guests and students to admire. A section of the original gymnasium floor with the Indian mascot painted on it is on display along with original paintings by Ed Henley. The totem pole commemorating the College's 600th win in 1973 and a tomahawk used to symbolize PJC's 1961 National Junior College Basketball Championship are on display as well. Alumnus Richard Golenda, Doug Knudson and Coach Don Stutters delighted the audience with PJC memories. ■

Walt and Gloria Schepp

Keith and Sharon Swerdfefer

Long-time supporters of PCC given President's Circle Award

Recognized for their significant contributions of time and resources, Gloria and Walt Schepp and Sharon and Keith Swerdfefer were presented with Pueblo Community College Foundation's 2008 President's Circle Awards.

Gloria and Walt Schepp, long time supporters of education, were instrumental in bringing higher education to the Fremont and Custer counties. With their participation, the PCC Fremont Campus became a reality at the ground breaking in the year 2000. Most recently, the Fremont campus benefitted from a significant gift of cash and stocks from the Schepps to be used where the need is greatest. This generous gift was in addition to the endowed Schepp Scholarships created years ago.

Walt has contributed time and resources to the Cañon City Library Board, Cañon City Chamber of Commerce and the Golden Age Center. Currently, he is the Assistant State Coordinator for the AARP Safe Driving Program, board member for the PCC Foundation and member of the PCC Fremont County Advisory Council. Walt likes to give credit to Gloria for taking good care of him.

The Pueblo Community College and its students have benefitted from in-kind excavating projects, the use of business equipment, student scholarships and other monetary and time contributions from Sharon and Keith Swerdfefer. Sharon has served on the Pueblo Community College Foundation Board of Directors as an officer and committee chair over the last several years and still serves today. Sharon has given leadership to the Foundation helping it contribute over $11 million dollars to the College for scholarships and program development.

Keith and Sharon have invested in the community of Pueblo for years by donating time and money to many public and private organizations including: El Pueblo Boys and Girls Ranch, Pueblo YMCA, YWCA, Greater Pueblo Chamber of Commerce, Pueblo Economic Development Corporation, Parkview Hospital, Sangre de Cristo Arts & Conference Center, Pueblo Boys and Girls Club and the Pueblo Zoo. ■

Pueblo Community College Art Students Earn Honors at the Colorado State Fair's Fine Arts Exhibition

As a prelude to the Colorado State Fair Fine Arts Exhibition, Pueblo Community College Foundation, co-hosted its 11th annual preview reception at the Colorado State Fair's Fine Arts Gallery. Students from our Gallery Management course assisted in setting up the exhibit and some of our own students were featured artists. Pictured are David Edwards, Department Chair and Faculty for PCC, and student Scott Reno. Reno is accepting a certificate of appreciation for his assistance in displaying the art. ■

PCC student wants to be in green energy movement

Brian Carter

Green energy is a hot topic in Colorado right now, and Brian Carter plans to be a part of this future. Brian is studying in the Solar/Wind Energy Maintenance program at PCC, and plans to graduate in 2011. As a veteran who spent 14-years in the military, Brian finds it easier to learn and understand his classes after being away from school for 15 years. But he has come a long way from those days in Robertsville, MO, and he loves every minute in college. You'll likely find him on one of the computers in the Learning Center, and he's always happy to visit with anyone. In fact, one of the main things that he likes about being at PCC is meeting people. ■

Non-traditional Student...

As a very special non-traditional, student Marcus Hernandez sees a clear path toward achieving success. By first appearances, he is a traditional college student. He's a 21-year old Pueblo native who hasn't had a long gap in his schooling. However, the fact that Marcus is blind has given him some unique challenges in his education. He has maintained a 3.3 GPA at PCC and will transfer in December. His biggest obstacles have been learning and adapting to the daily challenges of accessing the campus and his course materials. The tutorial program and Disability Services have helped him to be successful in this part of his dream of becoming a professor and earning a Ph.D. in History. Kudos to Marcus for his achievements! ■

Pueblo Community College Culinary Arts program

Pueblo Community College (PCC) Culinary Arts program participated in the 2008 Colorado State Fair's food demonstrations through the leadership of Brian Axworthy, PCC Faculty. Presentations were developed around the theme of instruction in Culinary Arts. Dishes from the beginning, intermediate, and advanced programs enthralled the audience. In addition, New American Regional Cuisine items were introduced by over ten students and three teachers. It was a great experience for the students and good exposure for the department. ■

New Health Clinic gives PCC students access to affordable services

The grand opening of the new PCC Health Clinic represents a giant benefit for its students. The Health Clinic now provides primary care medical services that many students previously didn't have access. PCC students enrolled in six or more credits pay a $20.55 fee that allows them to receive free office visits anytime throughout the semester. Those taking less than six credit hours pay a $25 office visit fee. Basic services include general office visits, physical exams, well-women exams, minor injury treatment, flu shot immunizations and prescribed medications. All students then pay a reduced fee for extended services that include lab work, any vaccines other than flu shots, and other testing. Students needing long-term service are referred to their personal physicians, and those with serious immediate concerns that the clinic is not equipped to serve are advised to seek emergency attention. The Health Clinic's resident physician, Dr. Silviano Arguello, maintained a practice in Pueblo for 23 years before taking the position at PCC. The Health Clinic is located in PCC's Medical Arts & Technology Building. Clinic hours are 8am to 4pm. ■

Report from our Fremont Campus

Alumnus returns as Academic Coordinator

By Sterling Jenkins

I began my academic career at PCC Fremont the summer of 1996 when the campus was located on the grounds of the Holy Cross Abbey. I have recently returned to the new Fremont campus as a coordinator of academic services.

Sterling Jenkins

It still amazes me how the campus has grown since I graduated in 1998. The programs and faculty are more intellectually diverse and sophisticated, and I trust the students are being prepared well for future academic success and employment. I know this because PCC gave me the tools to succeed in many professional and personal endeavors. I distinctly remember touring the state prisons of Cañon City and the Federal Correctional Complex in Florence, interviewing correctional officers and inmates alike. As a result, I decided I would major in the social sciences and specifically study criminology.

I later attained my bachelor's degree in psychology and master's in sociology and had the pleasure of teaching and researching the social sciences. I remember having taught courses at the Fremont Campus both for PCC and CSU-Pueblo and thinking how great it would be to work on the campus full time. This is now a reality and I am enjoying this new opportunity PCC has once again given me.

I consider myself to be very fortunate to be back at the Fremont campus and working with my former instructors, to whom I give much credit for my academic success. ■

Fremont Campus Adds Services for Students

Fremont Campus students found two new services awaiting them when they came to the campus this fall.

The Campus added a first-ever half-time financial aid advisor position to better help serve registering students as enrollment continues to grow at the campus. The new advisor will provide students access to higher education with face-to-face, one-on-one assistance with their financial aid needs to aid in their access to higher education. The advisor works hand-in-hand with the Pueblo campus financial aid office and also assists students in applying for scholarship funds.

The Campus also has partnered with Coyote Coffee Den to offer coffee cart and food items for students, faculty and staff. The campus' 700 students have not had food service available before now. Limited snacks and drinks were available in the vending machines, but Coyote Den now offers students the option of freshly-made sandwiches, salads, wraps and pizza plus coffee, lattes and cappuccinos. ■

Barn-Campus Expansion Conceptual Designs Unveiled

The PCC Foundation and the Fremont Campus staff held an open house on Thursday, Sept. 25 to unveil new conceptual renderings for the possible redevelopment of the old prison garden barn into an arts and humanities classroom building with an amphitheater nearby. Community members, faculty, staff and students were able to view the designs, give feedback, and ask the architects questions.

The designs are on display in the Enrollment Services Office at the Fremont Campus. Interested parties are invited to view the designs and provide comment to Campus Dean, Jennifer Pierceall Herman. Those interested in working on the project can contact Dean Herman to join the campus expansion and fundraising committees or to make a donation. ■

Now is the Time for YOU to Join the PCC Alumni Association

The Pueblo Community College (PCC) Alumni Association was founded as a way of providing a means to continue the relationship between the college and its alumni. Through the support and volunteerism of alumni and friends, we are offering you a sense of community and the opportunity to promote lifelong personal, educational and professional growth of alumni and students of the college. Many opportunities are available for you to stay connected to PCC and its current students. The Alumni Association is designed to allow maximum overall community participation while also raising funds to support PCC students through scholarships and other assistance.

To put it simply, the PCC Alumni Association helps PCC alumni stay in touch with one another, students and with the college. Getting involved is the perfect way to know what's going on with PCC, other alumni and the community. The Association and Foundation's LEGACY magazine is an innovative way to stay connected to news, events, networking opportunities and everything at PCC. You are invited to keep your information updated with us so that the Alumni Association can continue to offer you opportunities to strengthen and maintain your PCC Alumni connections. You can contact Bianca Flores at 719.549.3314, email her at bianca.flores@pueblocc.edu or update your information on our website at www.pueblocc.edu/AboutUs/Alumni. ■

Is your marriage the result of a PJC, SCSC or PCC romance?

It was brought to our attention that over the years many romantic relationships were fostered between students/alum of the College. A good example is the relationship that blossomed into marriage for Maxine Bachik '59 and Richard Golenda '59.

If your marriage is a result of such a relationship, we'd love to hear from you! Please let us know about your story. Send them with photos if possible to Kathy McHugh at 201 N. Santa Fe, Pueblo, Colorado 81003 or to kathryn.mchugh@pueblocc.edu.
